

To the Seniors:

Throughout our four years here at Wachusett, we have experienced some of the best moments of our lives thus far. Finding a family amongst our friends, football games, Homecomings, Winter Carnivals, Proms, the Presidential Election, even the occasional 'fun' group project. We have been tested, too. Who can forget all the construction, the tough exams, and the ice storm of '08? Enough is enough!

Now, as we graduate and head to college, move towards greater, more exhilarating experiences, let us never forget the friends who stuck by our side, the teachers who challenged us, and the memories we will keep forever.

Good luck to the Wachusett Regional High School Class of 2009! You will change the world! And remember to never forget the Mountaineer in you!

A Tribute to...

The Ice Storm of '08

December 11, 2008

Christmas vacation came early this year. Twenty four days of no school, two weeks without power, and one huge mess to clean up after it was over.

Our school was used as a shelter for those without power, and power companies came from several states to help restore power to our community.

WRHS

The damage caused by the storm was unimaginable, and certainly is something we will never forget.

The past four years have passed by so quickly. We had some good laughs along the way but now it's time to take our lives one step further. Bye Wachusett! :)

A black and white portrait of a woman with short dark hair, wearing glasses and a dark, patterned top. She is smiling broadly, showing her teeth. The background is a soft, out-of-focus grey.

A black and white portrait of a young man with dark hair, smiling slightly. He is wearing a dark V-neck sweater over a white collared shirt. The background is dark and out of focus.

"The Class of 2009 was the first class that I taught when I started teaching in 2004. From eighth grade to senior year they have always kept me on my toes."

M. Worthy's Favorite Memory of the Class of '09

"I have so many--the sincerity and kindness from the class, our great dance offs during Walden Pond--and who could forget the Harlem Renaissance Fest? Our sing along ballads in British Lit rivaled all those power ballad bands. I loved every moment with the Class of 2009--I feel lucky to have known so many of this year's graduating seniors."

Favorite Memory of the Class of '09

"The Class of 2009 always impressed me with their academic integrity, their willingness to challenge themselves, and their high level of intellectual maturity."

Words of Inspiration

"Never end your search for knowledge, truth, and light."

Favorite Memory of the Class of '09

"I have taught so many students from the Class of 2009 and, overall, I feel that this class is a group of great people who are fun to interact with. The students are so personable and amiable."

Words of Inspiration

"When confronted with obstacles and overwhelming road blocks, nothing is gained by giving up. Work ethic and organization are very important for the future."

Joseph Jourdain

Mathematics

Mr. Townsend's Favorite Memory of the Class of '09

"The seniors I have are dedicated, hard working, inquisitive, and motivated to succeed. Since I teach classes that are a mix of juniors and seniors, the only time I see them as just seniors is in homeroom and in math modeling, which are two completely different groups of seniors. But I found them to be blunt and to the point with very strong opinions on how things should be. But they aren't rude about it. It's refreshing."

Mrs. Sullivan's Favorite Memory of the Class of '09

"I don't have one single memory that stands out, but instead a general memory of a group of students that almost always came to my classroom (in the modulars) with big smiles on their faces, willing to jump into the activity of the day. As a group, the Class of 2009 has huge potential to be tapped based on their innate academic ability mixed with their love of life."

Class of '09 Memories of Mrs. Girouard

"Her vibrant personality, willingness to help others and passion for life and the Spanish language were contagious. She is a breath of fresh air and ignites a love of Spanish in the classroom. She brings years of experience but never loses her enthusiasm."

Mr. Monahan's Favorite Memory of the Class of '09

"I had the good fortune of having the class of 2009 twice (sophomore and senior year) because I was given the opportunity to say goodbye. Everyone has grown up into adults and they are more comfortable expressing themselves."

Words of Inspiration from Mr. Monahan

"I think it is very important to believe in yourself, but not in a prideful way, but to follow your dreams and keep focus on friends and family."

Class of 2009 Graduation

June 6, 2009 DCU Center, Worcester

"Welcome" Speech

Parker C. Callahan
Class President

Good afternoon and welcome graduates, parents, family, esteemed faculty, and friends to the commencement ceremony for the Wachusett Regional High School class of 2009. I must admit that I had a great amount of difficulty planning for my speech today. For a while, I struggled with how best to express myself. Writing isn't exactly my forte but, as many of you know, I do love music. The components of a well-written song all work together to impart upon its listener certain feelings or bring to light memories. I thought if I could write this speech in the same way I might write a song I would have an easier time getting out all I wanted to say about our time at Wachusett.

Often a piece of music will start with a soft melody being played delicately on, let's say, an acoustic guitar. It's a little sentimental, but it gets you hooked. It's just the beginning, but you want to see where this tune is going. The simple notes bring us back to our days as freshmen, our family classes, birds in the cafeteria, gym in the hallways, and those fond memories of meeting our new friends.

Then the percussion makes an entrance, opening with the soft rumblings of a bass drum, and then a transfer of melody from the guitar to the strings for a fuller sound. No longer timid freshmen, we felt comfortable in our role as Mountaineers. As this tune develops, so do our interests. During our sophomore year we expanded our social groups, began to find our niche in the school, and grew as students and members of the Wachusett community.

Now here's the fun part. Our melody really begins to swell as we hit our junior year. The strings race in an excited frenzy as the stress of ever-growing amounts of school work pile and the expectations of our teachers and parents heighten. The brass section throws wild punches to build excitement as we get closer and closer to our senior year, and then it happens.

We have reached the climax of this musical high school adventure. Our Senior year and graduation arrived in an explosion of sound, complete with cymbal crashes and full on brass and strings. Graduation comforts, like the future is in your hands and follow your dreams, sing from right and left like the angelic choir that leaps from the background. All the work we have ever done and all those years we spent in school culminate at this very moment. And the music suddenly stops.

But this song isn't over, oh no, there's something left. Softly, the melody returns and allows for reflection. The resonating final strums of the guitar remind us of the people who got us here today, the people we need to thank. First, we need to give our parents thanks for all of their love and support. Next, we need to thank our brilliant and caring teachers. And finally, we need to thank our administration and class advisers for all their work and dedication.

Thank you all for being here today and celebrating with us, and once again Welcome to the commencement ceremony for the Wachusett class of 2009.

"Sowing Seeds"

Graham Simpson
Valedictorian

Too often, we live lives of regrets, wondering about "what-ifs," "could-haves," and "should-haves." I can say that one decision I have never regretted was that of attending Wachusett Regional High School. Before I began my education as a Mountaineer, some people told me that Wachusett was too large, but I think that the school's magnitude is a part of what made it such an incredible experience. Wachusett offers us all so much. We were all involved in different groups and activities that made high school special for us.

At Wachusett, I sang and played piano in an incredible music department, with opportunities to back-up Kenny Rogers and win competitions in Toronto. As a spectator, I cheered on winning football, soccer, tennis, and volleyball teams. I traveled to Europe three times with Model UN where we held our own against private and international schools. I watched one of the state's best drama departments put on beautiful plays and musicals. And I firmly believe that Wachusett's academics rival those of any other school to be found in the area.

But the school is more than the opportunities and diversity that Wachusett's sheer size provides. It is made truly special by the teachers who put in so much time and effort into all they do.

Wachusett is the teacher who stays after school for hours upon hours to make sure his students are ready for an AP exam. Wachusett is the teacher who comes into school an hour earlier than normal to accommodate her student's busy after-school schedule. Wachusett is the teacher who puts in extra time coaching a Wachusett sports team. Wachusett is the teacher who cares about her student's personal and home life, not just performance in the classroom. Wachusett is the teacher who battles sickness to come in late at night and help his choir get ready for a concert. Wachusett is the teacher who comes to help at her students' fundraiser, even when she is eight months pregnant.

Some of those are my teachers and some of them are the teachers of my peers, but they are all real. Each of us have our own stories about that special teacher who helped us get through a rough patch or motivated us to succeed. Without my teachers at Wachusett, I wouldn't be standing here speaking to you now. I consider more than one teacher here a friend and am so thankful for the impact that all my teachers have had upon me.

Now is the time for us to take what we have learned at Wachusett and go out into the world to make a difference. The world is a rough place right now. We fear international flu epidemics and don't know where it is safe. The global economy doesn't look hopeful, and as bad as it is here, we must remember that this is pushing third-world countries into only deeper poverty. People worry about gas prices rising again this summer and don't know how they will pay for it. Our community's trees are being destroyed by beetles. Terrorism lurks and we know not when the next attack will occur. Schools are attacked by gunmen.

Why do the world's problems matter to us? They're too big for us, right? Wrong. We can start small. One of my heroes, Oscar Romero, wrote that "We plant the seeds that one day will grow. We water seeds already planted knowing that they hold future promise. We lay foundations that will need further development. We provide yeast that produces far beyond our capabilities. We cannot do everything, and there is a sense of liberation in realizing that. This enables us to do something and to do it very well. It may be incomplete but it is a beginning."

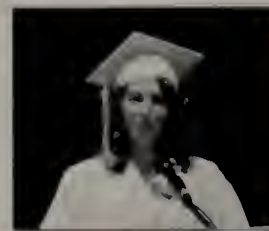

Sowing seeds may not seem like much, but when we do the smallest things, we are slowly changing the world in lasting ways.

When so many students sign up to donate blood that the drive runs out of spots, that is doing something. When someone helps a neighbor during the ice storm, that is doing something. When students show up early in the morning the day after prom to collect used bicycles for Africa, that is doing something. When someone helps a friend pass that required class, that is doing something. We all make important choices every day. I refuse to believe we are simply floating in some predestined flow. We are all bright stars in a dark sky and we all can spread our light. Our suns are rising. Now is the time. We can make a difference in the world, one seed at a time, with the knowledge that our parents, mentors, and teachers have given us. When the day breaks, our seeds will grow and blossom. Our efforts will shine forth upon this earth. Thank you. I wish you all the best of luck.

"Scientific Approach to Graduation"

Monica Gribouski

We are living in a time of incredible change. According to a presentation made by Karl Fisch, even though the first commercial text was sent in 1995, there are more text messages sent daily than there are people on earth. There are five times more words in the English language now than there was when Shakespeare was alive. If MySpace were a country, it would be the fifth largest in the world, even though the internet became available mere decades ago. And it is estimated that by 2013, the year that all those of you heading off to college will graduate, a supercomputer will be built that exceeds the power of the human brain. Perhaps the most frightening change of all is one that hits closer to home -- Facebook has changed its layout yet again, and still hasn't got it right.

I list all of these statistics not only because I am a humongous dork and that is what I'm meant to do, but because I believe that you, as a graduating class, are an embodiment of this change due to the fact that to survive change one has to be strong. It's a basic biological theory: only the fittest survive. Only the fittest can live on and pass on genetic information. We survive because we adapt.

And gosh have we adapted. We've put up with construction and confusion, lack of sports fields, elimination of electronics in school and the most changes in administration a class has ever had--- and we've adapted to everyone of them. I'm sure you'd be hard pressed to find a high schooler with as great a tolerance to asbestos as a Wachusett student, and, although it took a while, we all figured our way through the seas of people in order to get to the pool on the third floor. Even though our mascot is a hillbilly with a gun and for a year our fields consisted of mud and mud only, we've gone on to cream many an opposing sports team. And we've all done battle against that terrible, virulent disease that has stopped short weaker contenders: Senioritis. And you thought I was going to say Swine Flu.

So, in order to prolong your success at survival, I come here, to this podium, to offer you the greatest words of wisdom I can procure. I know this class is headed for great things -- we are the future doctors, lawyers, artists, leaders, and DP dancing masters of the world. And, in order to further your budding, successful futures, my most important, life-changing advice to you is this:

Never take candy from strangers in big white vans.

Seriously, guys. That just has stranger danger written all over it.

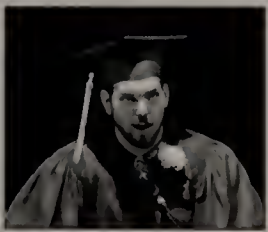

What I do want you to do, however, is talk to strangers. Meet people. Make as many connections as you can. Travel to strange places, engage in strange activities, and live as happily and as with as much fervor as you possibly can manage. I want you to adapt to wherever and whatever you may encounter in the same way you've adapted here, but do it better. You have the foundation that Wachusett has helped you set down, and now you need to use it. We live in social times, and friends and colleagues are what buoy us up through different occupations and enrich our lives far more effectively than the latest episode of Lost could possibly manage. Believe me--it is far better to make a fool of yourself making friends than to never take the risk.

I guess that is the main message of my nonsensical rambling report: take risks. Biologically speaking, it's the way we learn--trial and error--and it's only through expanding our horizons, testing our boundaries, and probably looking goofy while we're doing it that we can move forward. Change is upon us, the world is picking up pace faster than ever before, and every single one of you is one step closer to that big fat slap in the face known as real life.

You need to charge into it. The great philosopher Soulja Boy once stated, "Now watch me crank dat," but unfortunately for Soulja Boy, no one is watching him. The spotlights are on you.

Congratulations, Class of 2009, and welcome to your future.

"History Awaits Us"

Cody G. Kennedy

Well, we made it! Twelve long years of school that were full of continual strife, mistakes and achievements. But I am not up here to sound like a broken record and tell you that life is like a book and we just finished a chapter and it's time to turn the page. I'm not up here to say life is a highway or that our internal compasses are now pulling us in different directions.

Rather, I am up here to talk about reflection, and how we as people and students have been shaped by our family, schooling and friends. As we look at history we see that the influences that shaped great people shaped us as well.

Look at Albert Einstein for example. He was a great man who was shaped by these same influences. He, like many of us, hit many hurdles in his life and tasted his fair share of triumphs and defeats. Though he was a genius he did start off as a common man who had to rise to greatness one step at a time. He will be remembered throughout history.

A strong Christian pastor named Billy Graham remembered Einstein in a speech. Einstein was riding a train from Princeton when the conductor asked him for his ticket. Einstein could not find his ticket but the conductor okayed it saying, "Dr. Einstein, I know who you are. We all know who you are. I'm sure you bought a ticket. Don't worry about it." The conductor carried on his route punching tickets. When he turned around he saw Einstein on his hands and knees looking for the ticket and he said to the great physicist, "Dr. Einstein, Dr. Einstein, don't worry, I know who you are. No problem. You don't need a ticket. I'm sure you bought one." Einstein replied to the conductor saying this, "Young man, I too, know who I am. What I don't know is where I'm going." At the end of Billy Graham's speech he looked at the crowd and said to them, "I want you to remember this: I not only know who I am ... I also know where I'm going."

Like Billy Graham I KNOW who I am and WHERE I am going. But students of Wachusett Regional High School, class of 2009, what I don't know is WHO all of you are and WHERE all of you are going. But judging from the classmates I have interacted with in these four years, I can tell you that greatness is common here. Amongst our ranks I'm sure there are upcoming artists, athletes, scientists, politicians, and heroes. I not only hope, I know I will see your names and great deeds in the paper some day.

Stay true to yourself. Never forget who you are and where you came from, and you will find the way. God bless you, God bless America and of course "May the force be with you always."

"Play Tough"

Cara Harvey

By freshman year, I had long forgotten about filthy soccer cleats. I had traded mine in years before for a pair of ballet slippers, but it seems my father could not quite relate to this decision. I have four older brothers who were all athletes in high school, so I couldn't really blame him. As I hastily searched for my script and props before I left for play rehearsal, my somewhat puzzled father offered me some words of wisdom: "play tough," he said. At the time, I considered this the simple folly of my testosterone-poisoned father. "Break a leg" is for the arts, being tough is for the soccer field. However, since then, I have come to realize he gave me some of the greatest advice I have ever received.

As a look out at all my peers and classmates today, it's hard not to notice how much we have all changed. We've grown immensely, and if it were not for the dedication and effort we put into our endeavors, we would not be sitting here in the same dignified manner we are today. Over the course of these four years, the class of 2009 has always strived to be the best, and I have come to discover that that was the message my father was trying to convey to me.

My classmates and I have demonstrated in many different ways that we know what it means to "play tough." From the moment we set foot in Wachusett, we were presented with a challenge. It would have been easy to be distracted, as jackhammers and saws are not exactly conducive to studying, but our class strived for greatness and continually produced an extensive list of honor roll students. Students in our class showcased their scholarly efforts on multiple occasions ranging from the bi-annual publication of Rhubarb Pie, in which many Mountaineers showcased their poetic abilities, to the annual Science Fair, which garnered over sixty participants and numerous award recipients in the class of 2009. It is undeniable that our class worked hard to accomplish an outstanding academic record that we will look back on with great pride.

Student athletes in the class of 2009 made countless efforts to establish Wachusett's athletic program as one of the best in the state. It is quite evident, by the number of athletes who occupy the fields and facilities each day after school, that Wachusett athletes make every effort to be the best. From the hard hitting football players to the skilled players on the basketball court and beyond, the class of 2009 led their teams to become a force to be reckoned with. Each time the members of the Badlands look at the Wachusett scoreboard we will remember the glorious victories that our classmates have obtained.

In the arts department, music students practiced for endless hours to ensure that every note was in tune. Through enriching trips to Florida and Toronto, the music department received nationwide recognition for excellence. Visual artists in our class never ceased to amaze with beautiful works always receiving commendation. The theater company at Wachusett recreated moving scenarios from comical satires to complex dramas, with many members of our class working to improve the program and themselves each day.

The hard work didn't stop at the doors of Wachusett, however, as members of our class lead others to serve our community and school. Mountaineer Volunteers, Best Buddies, and many other groups put others as their priority, sacrificing valuable hours to better our environment and our relationships with one another. The fruits of their work can be observed in the pristine, welcoming environment that surrounds us. It is because of these students' hard work and leadership that we leave the community we are so proud of.

It's no wonder Wachusett students are so dedicated, as we have always been given excellent examples of this kind of devotion in our teachers, coaches, and parents. They too strived constantly to serve us and make our lives better. They have shown us that the dividends far outweigh the sacrifices when you strive to be the best at something you are passionate about.

The class of 2009 has always worked hard to strengthen all facets of our community, and that is what it means to "play tough." I now understand that playing tough doesn't necessarily mean throwing a ball until your arm is sore or running in the rain until you're soaked; it means persevering when you find something you love, and that applies to everything. At the moment, my father probably did not realize the value of these two words, but I will never forget what he has taught me. Our class has proven to be one of the greatest models of hard work and devotion. I hope that we will always cherish our accomplishments here at Wachusett, and always remember to play tough.

Principal Beando

Good afternoon, Chair of the Wachusett Regional District School Committee, Margaret Watson, School Committee Members, Superintendent Pandiscio, Deputy Superintendent Jack Locke, Wachusett Regional High School Staff, families, friends, and the Class of 2009. Welcome to the 55th Commencement Exercises for the Wachusett Regional High School.

It is a privilege and an honor for me to be able to represent our school in addressing all of you this final time. I humbly do so for a staff that makes up one of the finest high schools in our state. At this time I would like to ask all of the Wachusett Regional High School faculty that are present to please stand and accept my deepest gratitude for all the efforts they have put forward and wisdom they have shared in educating these fine young men and women. Thank-you.

Students, when you all woke up this morning it was, no doubt, with a feeling of anticipation. I would imagine that there was a second or two before you remembered why you were so excited and then it hit you. Ah yes, it's Graduation day. While some of you might have found it easier than others to climb out of bed, decide what to eat for breakfast, or even what you may wear to today's festivities, you all had one thing in common--the choices you were able to make in order to get here today. I do not mean since the time you woke this morning but rather the choices that you have consistently made starting four years ago and beyond.

The ability to make choices is, in part, what we are celebrating today. Those choices, of course, extend to far more than what to eat or what to wear. They extend to the great freedoms and decisions that we make that actually change and alter our lives.

When you were younger those choices were made for you. The very people who made those decisions on your behalf are probably here with you today. They made those decisions based on what they knew and what they thought would be good for you, however, this was not always what you wanted. The two, as you will have discovered by now, are not necessarily the same thing!

Gradually, as you learned a thing or two, your range of choices was extended. When you started school you made a huge transition towards becoming a far more independent person. Your parents had to step back and believe they had given you the best of starts. With your teacher's guidance and their support, they hoped you would become informed and start to make the right choices for yourself. It was that process that has led us up to today. Today, the day of your graduation from high school, sees you nearly fully grown and with more choices than ever. You have shown that you can act with wisdom and responsibility.

Earlier this week I made a choice to attend a musical performance at one of the District's elementary schools in which two of my children were taking part. The performance was a musical/play based on a children's book titled, "The North Star," authored by Peter H. Reynolds. In this performance a young boy was walking on a path through the forest and every so often he would stop and reflect on a blowing leaf, a ripple on a pond, or to hold a conversation with a rabbit or a bird, and at one time he stopped for a nap. Eventually, the boy followed his path and arrived at his destination. I suggest that this young boy's path is symbolic to the one that you will begin here today. On your path you will meet all types of characters that will offer you wisdom, and some may even try to fool you as they did the little boy. Hopefully, you will stop along the way of your path and reflect, as well, and I am sure you will stop for the occasional nap.

Today you stand at the beginning of that path that you have waited so long to travel. It is a day for you to look around you, to thank those whose guidance and support and advice has meant that you can enjoy the triumph that you have so richly deserved. It is from your parents and through your teachers that you stand so tall today.

Now you have learned to stand on your own feet. You have learned - through application and study. You have followed example and you have discovered, what in each of you, are strengths, and if you are honest, some weaknesses too. Don't be afraid to face them. We all have them.

Most importantly today is the day you begin the journey down your path. I hope that you make the choice, as did the little boy in the story of The North Star, the choice to be brave enough to follow whichever path will lead you to your dreams.

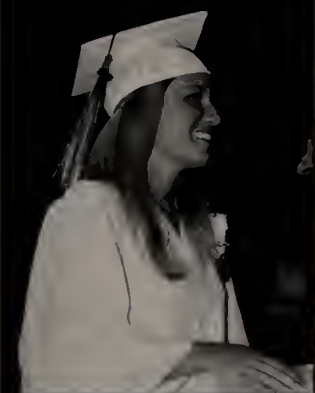

Whatever you decide, wherever you go, you go with our blessings and our wishes for a happy and successful future.

Congratulations and good luck WRHS Class of 2009!
